My dear young friends,

All of us youngsters have got a good understanding of the topic Generation Gap from the two issues of Akram Youth [June 2021 – This Gap Can Be Closed and July 2021 – Parents' Positives]. This understanding is becoming very useful in our daily interactions with our parents. Inspired by your positive feedback, we are presenting this third issue of Generation Gap, which focuses on the useful topic - ‘Viewpoint Difference’.

In this issue, we will see the difference in viewpoints of both parents and youth. We will recognize that and set an understanding to guide us in bringing about a great solution. I hope that this bridge of understanding will remove the misunderstandings and difference of opinions between us and our parents that arises due to the generation gap.

Introduction

Hello friends, I am Raj.
Welcome to my YouTube channel...

"My parents will never understand me."
“They think only their own viewpoint is correct.”
“They say ‘no’ to everything I say.”
“I feel that we are on opposite ends.”
"The gap between us will never close."

Friends, do you have similar complaints? Every youth running the race of life will have to face such complaints somewhere or other. At the same time, our parents, who do not want their child to fall behind, have such complaints for us.

Today we bring to you Generation Gap-3 ‘Viewpoint Difference’ which contains interesting examples of how differences arise between parents and children due to viewpoint differences. It will surely provide you the direction to solve questions that arise in your daily life.

So, let's see how the viewpoints of children and parents differ.

How often does this happen to you?
Tell the truth

Food

Why eat the same vegetables, flat bread, lentils and rice every day? Shouldn't you eat out at least once a month?

Dad – He doesn't know how meals are prepared in the hotel. Home cooked food is so good, so why spend unnecessarily?
Mom – Even though I work so hard to make good food, he still wants to eat out.

Branded clothes

The same quality clothing can be found a little cheaper elsewhere.

Since we buy clothes only a few times a year, we should only buy branded ones.
We surveyed several youth and parents on some similar questions. Let’s see the results of the survey:

Expectation

He can do much better than this, but he is being lazy.

Even though I got good results in the exam, they are not satisfied.

Late Night Outing

If he roams around at night, he might get into bad company.

Let’s enjoy with friends.

We surveyed several youth and parents on some similar questions. Let’s see the results of the survey:

Did you see friends?

How different the opinions of youth and parents are!

Let's see what the root cause of this is.
Why does this happen?

Technology: How much time should we spend on electronics? What should it be used for? In such matters, the viewpoints of children and parents are seldom the same.

According to a study, 85% of those born between 1946-1964 and 67% of those born between 1960-1980 do not have a smart phone. In comparison, about 92% of those born between 1981-1996 own a smartphone.

From a technical standpoint, the older generation mostly use their phones just to make phone calls. While for the younger generation, the phone is a digital window to connect with the world. The younger generation uses a phone for e-mails, online messaging, online payments, studying, doing business with the whole world from home, social media, playing games, listening to music, watching videos, making video recordings and for many other reasons.

Looking at this research, it seems that a bridge must be built between this Indo-Sri Lankan sea-like 'gap'. So, let's see what Niruma has to say about building this bridge.

Heart and Intellect

Parents think from the heart.
  Youth think from the intellect.

Parents think about their children.
  Youth think about themselves.

Parents think about the pros and cons.
  (E.g., What if an accident occurs?)

    Youth think solely about their own pleasure.
  (E.g., The road trip will be fun.)
Questioner: Niruma, this generation gap leads to arguments because my parents' point of view is different from mine.

Niruma: We all know that our viewpoint and theirs is different. But that does not mean that we can reduce the gap by arguing. It will cause the gap to widen.

Questioner: So how do we stop these arguments? What is the way to do this? Pratikraman?

Niruma: Do not argue. We need to understand their viewpoint. If we don't understand, then ask them to explain. Say, “Try to understand what I am saying; this is my viewpoint.” In the end, everything that happens is the result of scientific circumstantial evidences.

Questioner: Once the arguing starts, I am not able to stop it. I do have the Gnan that whatever happens next is the result of scientific circumstantial evidences.

Niruma: For that, you must spend 10 minutes every day for mom and dad.

Questioner: Doing what?

Niruma: Everyday, see where you argued with them throughout the entire day, and in that check where you made mistakes. Only if you do this every day, will there be awareness against it the next time. Otherwise, your awareness will keep on becoming dim. Have they committed an offence? They are acting as per their viewpoint. It is not your fault either as it makes sense from your viewpoint. Since we all have to live together, try to take as many adjustments as possible. If you cannot take an adjustment, just let it go at that time. If what you are saying is correct and if it is in the scientific circumstantial evidences, then you will get it regardless.

Friends,
The construction of the bridge is in progress.
Let’s take a short break ...
a fun activity is waiting for us ...
1. How many black dots are there?

2. Which figure is bigger?

3. What color does the black line become? Red or blue?

4. How many different colors of balls are there?

Friends,
This activity was great, wasn't it? Let's finish the break and start building the bridge again ...
Questioner: Jai Sat Chit Anand Pujyashree, my question is that my father and I have a difference of opinion regarding mobile usage. And sometimes when I do pratikraman, I think, “What did I do wrong?” Sometimes it feels like he uses it just as much as I do.

Pujyashree: Yes, but does your dad feel hurt or happy?

Questioner: Hurt.

Pujyashree: So, then it is your fault, turn back.

Questioner: And sometimes, I even apologize in person. Then Dad tells me to ask Deepakbhai how he would solve such an issue.

Pujyashree: No, but you may have developed some negative opinions towards your dad, ‘He is like this, he doesn’t let me do this. He is doing the same thing with mom’. There must be some negativity towards your dad, right?

Questioner: Yes, that’s why it happens.

Pujyashree: Yes, so erase all of that. Do pratikraman. Don't see your dad as being at fault. No matter what, he is your benefactor, see his positives. Doesn’t he have positives for you?

Questioner: There are many positives.

Pujyashree: Isn’t dad positive for mom? Is he positive for the home or not?

Questioner: Yes.

Pujyashree: So, let’s look at the positives! What is the point of seeing his faults?

Questioner: I don’t want to see his faults but sometimes conflicts arise.

Pujyashree: Yes, but why does the conflict arise? If you want to go for an outing and dad doesn’t let you, then your illusory attachment is not satisfied. As a result, you see his negatives.

Questioner: Not in such a matter, but it happens in minor things.

Pujyashree: Yes, you must be having some insistence from your side in minor matters, right?

Questioner: Yes, that’s exactly the reason.

Pujyashree: So, if you decide to do something and when he does not agree with it, then you see his faults. So, just leave it. Tell him, “Dad, my viewpoint was like this, but if you say no, I will not do that.”

Questioner: It happens because I am not able to explain things clearly to him.

Pujyashree: Yes, just decide that if he does not agree with what you have planned, then don’t do it at that time. Then, when he is in a good mood, tell him, “Dad, I had such a desire.” Parents heartily want to fulfill all the desires of their children. However, when children make a mistake, they get annoyed, but after a while, if the children talk to them lovingly, they will say, “No problem, you can do this much.” They will immediately allow you to do whatever you want.

Wow! Gnanis are simply amazing! They can easily solve even the most difficult questions. Indeed, this is a very important point which will help in resolving the generation gap. Now I will definitely try to fill this gap.
"Dad, the food here is hygienic and not very expensive. I really want to eat out today. If you agree, can we eat here today?"

"Dad, I like branded clothes, but I will not buy anything that exceeds our budget. I will buy less clothes. Is that okay?"
"Dad, I had given my best. I will correct the mistakes I made this time and will achieve better results with full effort next time."

"Dad, I am going out with Vyomesh and Kalpesh. We will enjoy a little and then come back. We will not do anything that leads to bad company. I will come back as soon as possible. May I go, Dad?"
What do children think of themselves... What do parents think...

I am not afraid of anything. He is only a child.

Let's go out to eat at a restaurant...

Parents waiting for their children to wake up on a Sunday.

I can make all these dishes at home...

Mom
I just finished studying, I can relax now.

Mom: Finish your chores...!

Will I get Rs. 200 to go out to eat today?

The most I can give is Rs. 10.

I am going on a trip this summer.

You will go someplace that is near and safe and there are no dangerous activities around and you will have an elder accompanying you so that you don’t get in any trouble, right?
